

67th NIS/BKX Joint Annual Meeting

THE NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF SCIENCE OUTSTANDING RESEARCHER AWARD

The National Institute of Science Outstanding Researcher Award may be presented in recognition of a scientist who has a distinguished career in research and has contributed to the higher education of minority youth by direct contact as an teacher, employer, research mentor, or volunteer.

Guidelines

This award is given to a minority scientist who meets the following criteria:

- Has an affiliation with the National Institute of Science or the Joint Annual Meeting (past or present)
- Has served and continues to serve as a role model for minority youth
- Has at least 10 years of research experience (defined by publications, patents, presentations at national meetings, etc.)
- Is currently involved in cutting-edge research
- Has worked directly with minority students in a teaching capacity
- Is recognized as an authority in a particular field of science or mathematics

Complete the following form and forward it along with curriculum vitae, recent publications, one letter of recommendation (from a colleague of the nominee), a statement of support from the person nominating the candidate and any other supporting material you wish to include. The NIS will provide transportation, lodging and meeting registration fee for the award recipient.
